FROM THE PUBLISHERS:

This record depicts, historically, the personnel and some of the training activities of the men of the 367th Infantry, U. S. A.

The many and great demands made upon the free time of the personnel, together with attendance at Service Schools away from the post, has made it impossible to show photographs of all of the men. Accordingly, it was necessary to picture those actually available at the time data for this Review were compiled.

COMMANDING THE 367th INFANTRY

Enlisting in the old 5th Cavalry in 1905, Colonel Wickham worked his way through the ranks from private to colonel.

He was born in Missouri in 1888 and joined the army as a youth of seventeen. When he was discharged after one enlistment in 1908 he wore sergeant's stripes, having served as trumpeter and noncommissioned officer in Troop K, 5th Cavalry.

In July, 1917, he received a commission as 2nd Lieutenant, 6th Missouri Infantry, National Guard. Promoted to Major during the war, he saw active service in France, where he was wounded in action. He was commissioned a Captain in the regular army in 1920 and attained the rank of full Colonel in December of last year. Colonel Wickham is an early graduate of the Infantry School, Company Officers' Course, where he graduated in 1923. Nine years later he completed the Advanced Course there.

The 367th Infantry's new commander is an experienced leader of colored troops. He came to the regiment from Fort Benning, where he commanded a battalion of the 24th Infantry there. He is a specialist in defensive operations against parachute troops, his battalion having carried on extensive maneuver tests with the Parachute Training School at the Georgia post.

The 367th Infantry Regiment was first formed at Camp Upton, New York, in 1917 as a 92nd Division unit under the command of the late Colonel James A. Moss, a distinguished son of Lafayette, Louisiana, and one of the United States' outstanding army officers. Other officers of the regiment were Lt. Col. Wm. G. Doane, Majors Charles Mitchel, Fred W. Bugbee, Wm. H. Edwards, Henry H. Arnold, Wilford Twyman, Charles L. Appleton, Fitztingo L. Minnegorode, and Captain Fredrick Bull. The colored officers were Captain Peter McCall, Captain Robert B. Chubb, Captain Charles Garvin, Chaplain L. H. Hamilton, 1st Lts. Charles Lane, J. H. N. Waring, H. J. W. Clifford, Almando Henderson, 2nd Lts. R. D. Hardeway, E. P. Sawyer, R. W. Fearing, and Lts. E. B. Williams and Thomas J. Bullock.

The colors of the regiment were furnished by the Union League Club of New York, and presented at Camp Upton, New York, on March 2, 1918, by Governor Whitman, then governor of New York State.

Early in June of 1918 the regiment went to France and moved to the Bourbonne Les Bains Training Area, where it arrived about June 29th. Here it received an intensive training course in the vital elements of combat for about eight weeks before moving on to Bruyeres.

About August 23, 1918, the regiment moved with the division to the St. Die sector, where it was affiliated with the French 87th Division. On August 30th the 92nd Division became responsible for the entire sector.

On August 31 the Germans attacked in an attempt to recapture the village of Frappelle. Their attack was supported by intense artillery bombardment, mustard gas, and flame throwers, but they were repulsed with heavy losses. The American troops had thirty-four wounded and gassed and four killed.

On the morning of September 12 the 367th Infantry Regiment was bombarded with what at first was thought to be gas shells; however, on closer inspection they were found to contain circulars of printed matter. These circulars were intended to destroy the desire of the colored soldiers to fight for the United States. They asked the soldiers to throw their guns away and come over to the German lines where they would find real friends. It may be said to the honor and credit of the many thousands of Negro officers and men that the invitation had no effect other than to present an intimate view of the German methods and to inspire in them a loftier conception of their duty to the United States.

On September 20 the regiment was relieved with the division from the St. Die sector. During the four weeks the Division had held this sector all attacks had been repulsed and quantities of material had been captured.

On September 24 the Division was again in position in the Argonne Forest where it was brigaded with the French XXXVII Corps. October 1st to 3rd it was in reserve with the 1st Dismounted French Cavalry Division.

On October 5th the Division was withdrawn from the Argonne sector and ordered to the Marbache sector northwest of Nancy.

On October 10th and 11th, 1918, the Division attacked with the 2nd Army and occupied the Bois Cheminot, the Bois de la Voivrotte, and Bois Frehaut. In this last attack on November 10th the 367th Infantry was attacking in column of battalions and maintaining close contact with the units on its left. The attack started at 7:00 A. M. and went well until about 9:30, when a unit adjacent to the 367th was held up by murderous machine-gun fire covering the enemy's barbed-wire entanglements. The 1st Battalion of the 367th Infantry and the Regimental Machine Gun Company and a company from the 350th Machine Gun Battalion held the Germans at bay, silenced their machine guns and permitted the unit which had been held up to withdraw. For this action the French Commanding Officer under whom the rescued unit was brigaded cited the Battalion and the Machine Gun Companies. In this action the regiment lived up to its motto of "See It Through."

HISTORY . . .

On November 14th the Division was relieved by the French and went into training west of the Moselle.

On December 15th it moved to Mayenns, the American embarkation center, where it continued training. On January 30th the Division started moving to Brest and its leading elements started home. The last elements arrived in New York on March 6, 1919, and the 367th Infantry was sent to Camp Meade, Maryland, where it was demobilized on March 7, 1919.

The regiment was commanded throughout its combat in France by the late Colonel James A. Moss.

On the return from France, at an appropriate ceremony, the colors were symbolically returned by Colonel Moss to Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, who acted for the League Club. Major Daniel Appleton commanded the escort.

Official records show that the Division engaged in sixty-seven days of battle in three major World War sectors against the Germans, namely: St. Die, 28 days; Meuse-Argonne, 7 days, and Marbache, 32 days.

Early in January, 1941, the War Department ordered the reactivation of the 367th Infantry Regiment. The new regiment was formed on March 25, 1941, and assigned with the non-divisional troops at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana, for training. As a nucleus, 200 enlisted men were sent from the 25th Infantry, Fort Huachuca, Arizona, as a cadre to direct the training of the draftees who were to be sent from the various states, mostly southern.

On March 1, 1941, Colonel Ralph C. Holliday was assigned to command the newly-activated 367th Infantry Regiment. He reported for duty on March 20. The commanding officer at that time had been in military service for thirty-four years. A native of Illinois, where he was born in 1886, he graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1912. Colonel Holliday served with the Air Corps during its infancy and with the 22nd Infantry along the Texas border until 1915 when he went on a Hawaiian tour. For six years he was professor of Military Science and Tactics and was also commandant of the Cadets at the Citadel, one of the nation's leading military colleges. In July, 1940, Colonel Holliday returned to the National Guard. He was connected with the 115th Infantry, Maryland National Guard. When the regiment was called into federal service on February 3, 1941, the Colonel accompanied the unit to Fort Meade, Maryland. From this point he was called to duty with the 367th Infantry, where he remained until he relinquished command of the regiment on February 19, 1942, and received assignment with the Third Corps Area, Baltimore, Maryland.

Colonel Holliday was instrumental in having the War Department name the recreation hall of the 367th Infantry "Bullock Hall" in honor of Lt. Bullock, the first officer of the regiment to meet his death at the hands of the enemy in World War I. Also during his administration the War Department transferred the regimental colors with two old-style battle streamers from Fort Benning, Georgia, where they had been in the custody of the Infantry School for twenty-two years.

Succeeding Colonel Holliday as commander of the 367th Infantry Regiment was Colonel Fred O. Wickham, who was assigned to the regiment by the War Department on January 19, 1942. Colonel Wickham, a veteran of nearly thirty years' service, assumed command of the regiment on February 19, 1942.

A native of Missouri, Colonel Wickham was born in 1888 and joined the army as a youth of seventeen years, enlisting in the 5th Cavalry. When he was discharged in 1908, he wore sergeant stripes, having served as trumpeter and noncommissioned officer in Troop K, 5th Cavalry.

In July, 1917, he received commission as a second lieutenant, Sixth Missouri Infantry, National Guard. Promoted to the rank of major during the war, he saw active service in France, where he was wounded in action. He was commissioned a captain in the regular army in 1920 and attained the rank of full colonel in December of last year.

Colonel Wickham is an early graduate of the Infantry School, Company Officers' Course, where he graduated in 1923. Nine years later he completed the advanced course there.

The 367th Infantry's new commander is an experienced leader of colored troops. He came to the regiment from Fort Benning, where he commanded a battalion of the 24th Infantry there. He is a specialist in defensive operations against parachute troops, his battalion having carried on extensive maneuver tests with the parachute training school at the Georgia post.

During the short period that Colonel Wickham has been in command of the regiment both officers and enlisted men alike have recognized the dynamic force and tremendous power of a personality whose sole determination is to put into action by precept and example a leadership that is destined to make the 367th Infantry Regiment a unit that will live up to the fullest extent the noble traditions which have come out of so rich a heritage where valor and heroism as well as sacrificial devotion have played so conspicuous a part in the life history of the regiment.

"We'll see it through
 For the dear old U. S. A.
 Yes, we'll see it through.
 We will always find a way
 To keep "Old Glory" flying,
 To hold what we have won,
 To free this land of enemies
 And fight till this is done.
 Yes, we'll see it through,
 Uncle Sam, we're all for you."
