A Vivid Story of the Scramble Through Craggy
Passes and O'er Dizzy Paths

By Ludwig K. Moorehead, New York

As all who have climbed that most glorious of eastern peaks know, Mt. Katahdin thrusts its bulk up through the great northern Maine forest in the approximate shape of a fish-hook, the shank extending to the north, and the point lying to the east.
The highest point of the mountain is about where, on the fishhook plan, the curve away from the shank begins. This main outline is varied by many spurs separated from each other by deep basins, or ravines; these spurs, for the most part, extend away from each side of the shank of our piscatorial conception of the general shape of the mountain. The largest of the basins, however, is enclosed by the semi-circular part of the hook. It is called the Great Basin, and through it runs one of the three orthodox trails to the mountain. The Abol, or Slide Trail, makes its approach from the Penobscot River, on the south, while Hunt's Trail, starting from Sourdnahunk Stream, follows up the western shoulder of the mountain. Each of these trails has its peculiar charms; the first mentioned is probably the most spectacular approach to the mountain, leading as it does into the impressive Great Basin. The Appalachian Mountain Club has done much recently to improve this trail and make known the glories of a trip by this route.

While fishing the numerous trout streams and ponds accessible from York's Camps, some six miles west of Katahdin, I often wondered just what sort of country lay behind a range of mountains running west from the south end of Katahdin. This range terminates on the west in Mt. O J I, so named from a series of slides on its slopes, which takes the form of these letters. Extending north from O J I is another range composed of Mt. Coe and three symmetrical peaks called The Brothers. The eastern end of this range lies near Katahdin's north peaks. Thus the main axis of Katahdin and the two ranges I have described from a triangle. On inquiring of several guides about what lay in this triangle, I was informed that there was a sort of basin called the "Klondike." It was so named, they said, by an old Indian trapper, now dead, who had been to Alaska, and had honored this district with the name because it was the wildest part of the Katahdin country. He apparently was the only man who went in there often. The "Klondike" was "a hell of a place," I was told; but persistent, although rather vague rumors that therein lay some dead-waters containing large and absolutely uncivilized trout, coupled with the fact that all agreed that the region was very wild and seldom visited, brought me to a decision to go in there if I could get anyone to accompany me.

Mayo Pond, the Klondike and the Brothers, Mt. Katahdin

My good friend Ernest Mayo, guide at York's Camp, consented to go. Packing a minimum outfit for two days, we hiked north from York's on Daisey Pond, and started up the slope of the range east of O J I. The old lumber roads we followed grew more and more indistinct; we floundered among " blow-downs" and "slash" up the steep slope until we reached the upper limit of the cuttings. With a sigh of relief we entered the first growth only to find that from here on to the crest the only reason that the timber had not been cut was that the gradient made it almost impossible to climb without using all fours. We spent all morning covering the four miles to the crest, where we ate a meal that, I may say, was well earned.

To my surprise we found that there was scarcely any drop from the crest of this range to the "Klondike" proper. Hurrying north, we each climbed a tree. Before us stretched a great expanse of absolutely flat country, walled in by the ranges I have mentioned. Not a single hardwood showed in the virgin forest covering this basin; to one used to the second growth of the lumbered districts which include practically the entire state, this untouched forest appeared at once desolate and fascinating. Such uniformity as this growth of spruce and fir presented was very impressive. However, we were there to find the deadwaters, so, heading northeast across the greatest axis of the basin, and bearing on a great pink dome-like spur among the northern peaks of Katahdin, we plunged into the thick of it.

It was thick, and it continued to be thick, with the exception of bog-like open patches where the trees were curiously stunted. We travelled steadily toward our pink dome all afternoon, and nary a deadwater or stream did we strike until we had almost reached the western slopes of Katahdin. Here we came upon a good-sized stream flowing north, which proved to be part of the south branch of the Wissataquoik, which is known as one of the wildest streams in the State. We followed this north through very hard travelling, hoping to strike the deadwaters or a pond which was rather vaguely indicated on our maps. I feel that I may safely state that there is no accurate map of this particular section of country.
Evening came on, and no pond. We began to consider the deadwaters a myth. Making camp in the dark is poor sport, so we stopped where we were, and while Ernest built a fire and lean-to, I sought trout for supper. The stream literally teemed with them. The fish were small, but their sweetness seemed to be in inverse proportion to their size. I blush when I remember how many of those highly colored little fellows we devoured that night.

The next day we followed the stream south, hoping to find that it had its source in a pond. On our way we passed a large brook coming in from the east. Thinking that there might be a body of water at the head of it, we followed its course until we had gone some distance up the first slopes of the shank of Katahdin. At this point we decided that the easiest way out would be to return via the mountain itself. As we continued up the stream, we gave up all hope of locating any pond, and concentrated on reaching the mountain as soon as possible, for it seemed to be drawing away from us as we travelled toward it. The timber grew constantly smaller until the spruce was little more than waist high, and very dense. We had fairly to lunge through it. We were becoming very tired, and much discouraged with the slow progress we were making, when suddenly, as we came over a little rocky eminence at the entrance to one of the gulches making into the Western side of the mountain, a glorious little pond appeared almost under our very feet. We hurried to the shore, rounded a point which had blocked our view, and found, to our astonishment and delight, that it was perhaps a half to three-quarters of a mile in length, very deep and narrow. It nestled at the foot of a great crag which formed the north wall of the gulch, or basin. To the east a cataract coursed down Katahdin's gray granite into the head of the lake. The entire shore, and the visible bottom, was formed of clean cut ledges and boulders, with the exception of a point near the inlet, where the stream had washed in a certain amount of fine sand.

To say that it was startling to burst from the spruce upon a scene like this would be putting it mildly. Ernest, usually taciturn, became tremendously enthusiastic, and well he might, for the lake was indescribably beautiful. Neither of us had ever heard before of its existence, so I took the liberty of naming it after him — Lake Mayo. I tried for some time to raise a trout from its clear depths, but to no effect; I imagine that the outlet was too precipitous to permit any fish to ascend from the Wissataquoik. When I suggested to Ernest that he carry a couple of five gallon cans in across the “Klondike” and stock it, I was surprised at the nature of his reply, and the way he phrased it!

The way to the top of the Katahdin ridge or saddle looked easy, with its stretches of smooth granite, patched here and there with a smooth green growth which we thoughtlessly took to be grass or small bushes. This smooth green nearly proved to be our undoing, in the form of stunted spruce. Until we hit that spruce growth the going was not bad, but then — words fail to describe what a heartbreaking task it was to plunge through that Krumholz, as it is called. It was so thick and strong that it required constant lunging with all the momentum one could muster to make any sort of progress. Fifteen minutes to cover a hundred yards was good time in some places. It tore our clothes to shreds; my breeches, already ripped, left my shins to the tender mercies of the branches. We had visions of another night on the mountain, but at length gained the bare stretches of the crest, everlastingly thankful for the easy going that we had before us.

A look back over Lake Mayo across the wild “Klondike” basin that we had crossed revealed the deadwaters glistening in the northern part of the basin. We had missed them by bearing too much to the south. A subsequent visit to them proved that they were simply alive with trout, and very unsophisticated trout. The size of the fish, however, did not come up to expectations. Turning our backs on this view was not easy, but we still had to make the summit, or a point near it, to strike the Hunt Trail for the descent. While going south along the ridge I could not resist a detour to the east to see what lay in that direction. To my astonishment, I came out on the brink of a very deep basin, not so large as the well known Great Basin, but extremely desolate in appearance. This aspect was due to the fact that the walls and bottom were devoid of any kind of vegetation. I imagine that this great gulch was comparatively recently gouged and gutted by a geologically modern glacier. The awful grandeur of it all held me spell bound; at last I broke away to hurry after Ernest, who was working south toward the trail.

As we neared the summit all the familiar vista came into view — the abyss of the Great Basin yawning to the east; Pemola and the “Knife Edge” presenting, as Mr. C. E. Hamlin has expressed it “a savage and chaotic desolation that is probably without parallel in Eastern America;” the immense network of lakes and rivers in the Penobscot Valley; and Moosehead, to use the phrase of one writer, heliographing from the western horizon. Late as it was, we could not but pause to marvel once more at the vast expanse of lake and forest below us. Hunt’s Trail, when we hit it, seemed like a broad highway compared to the travelling we had experienced that day. We were duly grateful to the men who made it.

If anyone who reads this narrative and expects to climb Katahdin desires to look upon the craggy waste of the North Basin and the beauty of Mayo Pond and its gulch, he can do so quite easily by going north from the summit along the main ridge or saddle — the shank of our fish hook — and looking over either side. They are well worth the time required in going out for a view. There are also four interesting small ponds in a large Northwest Basin (north of the one in which Mayo Pond lies), once visited by Dr. LeRoy H. Harvey, the botanist. However, I should hesitate to recommend to anyone the descent to the shores of Mayo Pond unless he be possessed of a great store of patience, a good wind, and very stout breeches!

Majestic Moosehead Lake and Its Resorts
The Famous Inland Sea of the Maine Woods and Its Manifold Attractions

The earliest comers to the Maine Woods—the pioneer forerunners of the thousands of men and women who yearly visit the great vacation country made accessible by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad—were drawn by the magnificent scenic attractions and the unsurpassed fishing offered by Moosehead Lake, which has lost none of its popularity in spite of the fact that since those days dozens of other lakes and rivers and localities have gone to the forefront with fishermen, hunters and canoeists. Moosehead is generally recognized as the foremost of all fresh-water resorts of America. It is an imposing basin—a great inland sea—and Moosehead devotees always loyal to their favorite woods resort, contend that its length of 40 miles, from Greenville to Northeast Carry, and its width of 20 miles, make it the largest lake wholly with the boundaries of the United States. However this claim may be regarded and allowing there may be those who dispute this honor for Moosehead, there is no difference of opinion that for scenic beauty and superlative natural splendor, Moosehead, surrounded by forest-crowned mountains, cannot be excelled. Regardless of season, whether it be in early spring when enthusiastic fishermen are on their favorite "spots" awaiting the departure of the ice, in mid-summer when Moosehead's breezes afford relief from heat and give stimulation that comes only from the zephyrs of the Maine Woods, or in the autumn, when turning leaves present a gorgeous array of colors that beggar description,—at all seasons Moosehead is a delight.

Superior attractions are offered by the resorts in the Moosehead region for the vacation-seeker, the fisherman and the hunter and delightful vacations can be spent by taking the trip up Moosehead from Greenville Junction, to Northeast Carry and spending a day or two at the different points which are so popular with the regular comers to Moosehead and it should be remembered that to really enjoy Moosehead it should be explored from end to end.

Moosehead Lake is reached by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, which runs to the shore of the Lake at Greenville Junction ninety-one miles from Bangor. The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad meets with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Greenville Junction. At Greenville Junction there is a good hotel, the Pis cataquis Exchange, numerous outfitting stores and other establishments of interest to sportsmen and persons on vacations. Greenville Junction, and Greenville, a mile away, have long been important centers for canoeists, fishermen and hunters. A mile and a half from the village, on the shore of the lake, is the Squaw Mountain Inn, an increasingly popular resort, with many attractions for its guests, who come from Maine and many outside state points. It can be reached by automobile, over a good road, or by motor boat.

Steamboat service on Moosehead is provided by numerous first-class steamers of the Coburn Steamboat Company, and not until the full steamboat trip from Greenville Junction to the head of the lake, forty miles away, is enjoyed, can one say that he has seen Moosehead. There are two routes for the steamboats. One runs straight up the lake to Northeast Carry, and the other is to Lily Bay, for years an important Moosehead Lake station both with sportsmen and with the big companies that carry on lumbering operations on Moosehead’s shores. Lily Bay is particularly well known among hunters because of the big game that is shipped from this point by successful sportsmen.

After Greenville Junction, the first stop on the trip up the lake is Capen’s, the popular resort on Deer Island which has long been one of the landmarks on Moosehead. Beside the hotel there are numerous outlying cabins for the guests. Even from the passing view from the steamboats, Capen’s presents a most attractive and inviting aspect.

The next stop after Capen’s for the Coburn steamboat is the renowned Mt. Kineo House, twenty miles from Greenville Junction. The world-known resort is on a peninsula which makes into the lake from the base of Mt. Kineo, a massive eminence of solid flint which seems to spring from the surface of the lake, so abruptly does it rise. The legend is that the flint from Kineo was known to the Indians throughout this section of the land and that the redskins came by canoe from far-distant points in Canada to secure the flint for arrow-heads, hatchets and other primitive utensils of war and domestic use. From a rendezvous of the aborigines, Kineo has become the most famous fresh-water resort on the continent. Beside the mammoth hotel, handsome cottages, the yacht club, the golf club, and bridle paths, expansive lawns and the numerous mountain trails contribute to the completeness of the resort.

Rockwood, known also as Kineo Station, is across the lake from Kineo and at Rockwood the Maine Central Railroad touches Moosehead’s shores. From Rockwood there is one of the Great Northern Paper Company’s famous forest automobile highways through the woods to Seboomook. From there it runs on to Canada Falls, twenty-seven miles distant, and to Russell Stream, sixty miles away. Both these points are widely known for their fishing and for the big deer which are found thereabout.

The popular West Outlet Camps conducted by Gilbert & Coombs are twenty-four miles from Greenville Junction and they are regular stopping places for the Coburn steamers. From Rockwood, the boats make for the head of the lake.

At the end of one of Moosehead’s arms is Northwest Carry, now generally known as Seboomook, and at the terminus of the other arm is Northeast Carry. At the former is the Seboomook House, which is picturesquely located and which commands a fine view of the mountains which line Moosehead’s eastern shore.

Northeast Carry is one of the best known points in all the Maine woods because of the fact that it is the starting point for most of the parties making the canoe trips through the Allagash and Penobscot waters. Here is the Winnegarnock House with out-lying cabins and the big outfitting store. Northeast Carry is more than the starting point for the canoe parties. It has won a wide-spread fame because of its own attractions as a resort, and the man or woman going there for a vacation is sure to have the best of times. From Northeast Carry is reached Lobster Lake, one of the most beautiful of Maine Woods waters, and there are numerous other places nearby which are favorite spots with fishermen and hunters. The trip down the West Branch to Lobster Stream and then up the stream to the lake is a delightful side-trip.

To reach Lily Bay, one of Moosehead’s large inlets after leaving Greenville Junction, the steamboats continue up the lake for half a dozen miles and then leave the up-lake route for a turn into the bay. The first resort is Greenleaf’s Camps on Sugar Island, eight miles from the Junction. These camps have had a long span of popularity. Their picturesque location and the general satisfactory surroundings have won many enthusiastic friends. Another mile brings the steamboat to the camps of the Nighthawk Club.

Lily Bay, the terminus, is twelve miles, and here is the Lily Bay House, long known to fishermen, hunters and lumber operators. Lily Bay is renowned not only for its own attractions but also because it is the entrance to a widely famous vacation section. From Lily Bay there is an exceptional automobile road; in fact, it is a forest boulevard leading past Kokad-jo, on First Roche Pond, on through the woods for twenty-three miles to Ripogenus, where is located the gigantic dam of the Great Northern Paper Company. This dam is one of the five greatest storage basins of the world and naturally attracts many sightseers.

This road also leads to the foot of Chesuncook Lake, the starting point for canoe parties. This automobile highway through the forest from Moosehead Lake to Ripogenus gives an opportunity for an extraordinary motor trip and it is taken advantage of each season by many of the visitors to Kineo and other resorts in this locality. Lily Bay, besides being accessible by this pleasant steamboat trip can now be reached also by way of the fine automobile boulevard from Greenville.

Moosehead Lake is a favorite place for summer school camps for boys and girls and certainly no spot can be found offering greater vacation possibilities for young people.

These summer schools for boys and girls are becoming vastly popular and no place provides opportunities among more entrancing surroundings for all the summer camp programs of recreations and practical lessons in woods-craft than does Moosehead Lake.

"YOU ought to go to Shin Pond!"

Howe said that to me not once but many times. Meet him on a train, in a hotel office, on the Katahdin trail, anywhere, and he sang that same refrain: "You ought to go to Shin Pond!" There was no escaping it. The first time he said it I knew that, eventually, I'd go there. Knowing this I should have followed the rest of the flour sign advice which says: "Why not now," and gone then and there. We do not do the things we ought just when we should; that is why for years I heard Howe say a dozen times each season: "You ought to go to Shin Pond." Then I went and now in emulation of him I say to you:

You ought to go to Shin Pond!
Shin Pond is both a place and a State of Mind.
You don’t get that State of Mind stuff. You will, once the advice herewith passed on is accepted, followed and carried out; when you have seen Shin Pond. It won’t take you more than a dozen or so seconds to grasp the fact that it is very much a place and before the visit has lengthened into hours the comprehension that it is a State of Mind will be all yours. You will find thereat such a peace of mind, contentment, joy at being alive and a feeling that you never wish to depart as has never before been yours; there is your State of Mind!
Surely you ought to go to Shin Pond!

Is it possible that you have never heard of this place? Shows you’ve not made a real study of the land of fish and game and recreation known as the Maine Woods or the Bangor & Aroostook region. Had you done so it seems impossible that you would not have heard of this bit of water which the Maker dropped down among the hills and mountains and woods of Maine, like a beautiful gem in an exquisite setting. It is one of the jewels of the great out of door of the Pine Tree State. In the sunlight it scintillates, coaxing you forth to taste of its pleasures; when the storm clouds gather and the winds ruffle its surface there is a different call. It holds you by its ruggedness; it dares you to venture forth and brave its fury, to pit your skill and cunning as a canoe man against its strength; and then when the great moon rises and the water of the lake is stilled, the sheen holds you and throws your thoughts into repose and you can dream of the days long ago and of those to come; and can get a new idea of when nature is at its best, of what is beauty and bliss; then you may learn that there is no solitude of the great woods and waters, but that they are populous with new thoughts which make for better men and women and a better world.

It is not difficult to follow this advice of "you ought to go to Shin Pond." All you have to do is buy a ticket to Patten in the State of Maine and then via the trains of the Bangor & Aroostook and such other railroads as it is necessary to use from your home, make your way to that place. There it is but half an hour's ride, even in a slow moving automobile, to this beauty spot, Shin Pond.

Pooh, say you, but I want to get into the big woods.

You will be there once you reach this resort. Patten, friends, is on the border line. It is to the woods of Maine what the old frontier town was to the west when the cowboys and their gun play were something more than motion picture actors. It has been such from the first day of its settlement, for it was then a lumber town. Its founders were the old "pine lumbermen" of the State of Maine. They started the settlement and from that day to this it has been a factor in the industry and the last settlement from which the woodsman departs for the woods which constitute the Penobscot East Branch region. Shin Pond is in the deep woods. You can travel fifty or a hundred miles further and not be more in the wilderness than you are right there on the shores of this water.

Summer or winter it holds allurements for all. The fisherman can get his salmon, trout or togue. During the open season on moose they are to be had, while the hunter is as certain of his deer as anywhere in the State. Bear, too, are frequenter of the woods of this region, while partridge, rabbit and smaller game are in abundance. There is nothing which the sportsman seeks that he cannot find here. For the tourist who has no ambition either to hunt or to fish — there are many such — there are attractions more numerous than can be here enumerated. Canoe trips about the lakes, expeditions the object of which is to try and study the ever busy beaver, or to seek the spring of life giving waters upon which the aged hermit, Old Hunter Davis depended for good health, to just roam the woods and hills and to get a first hand insight into how the State of Maine guards its forests from fire — all these are a part of the many things which will make the visit to Shin Pond worth while.
Always there is Katahdin beckoning to you. Sometimes it is, but a glimpse through the pelting rain, or the enveloping fog; again it is a dazzling brightness which the big mountain shows to you, for it is the season when the snow is on the peak and sides and the sun pours down upon them, making a brilliant picture, which adds to the determination, providing you have never climbed its rough sides, to some day visit the mountain's tip; and if you have been there, it clinches the desire to return, for Katahdin seen from any point on Shin Pond is a tantalizing siren, a vamp among mountains, and she is sure to get you!

Shin Pond as a resort for the vacationist, the fisherman, the hunter, as mentioned, presents all that is to be desired. Each can get what he seeks, while the artist will find there an inexhaustible mine of material for his brushes. Whatever one's notion of a perfect outing in the woods be, he can satisfy it there. If he prefers the canvas tent, the bough bed, the camp fire, it is his for the taking. The shores of this lake abound with desirable camping sites. There are scores of springs from which to dip the sweetest, coolest water with which man has ever quenched his thirst. Again, if he prefers the regular sporting camp where there are spring beds, store mattresses, sheets and pillow slips, food served in a regular dining room, he has his choice of a number to go to. Each has its own particular charm and the man who goes to any of them is sure of excellent accommodations. One who visits Shin Pond is not chained to the place. He may make it his base camp and from there wander the woods for many miles on the hunt and, if he desires to fish, there are smaller but equally well stocked lakes and ponds easy of access from this point. Not the least of these is Davis Pond on the other side of Sugar Loaf mountain. This is one of the best fishing waters in the State. There, too, can be found a good camp and when the people of Patten and its vicinity, which mean those who live at Shin Pond, speak of the Shin Pond region, they are including Davis Pond as a part of the territory.

Neither last nor least of this wonderful section are the men. They are a rugged, honest, likable band, who admire the true sport — the man who goes into the woods not alone of a desire to slay, but because of a love of nature, a wish to be back there where everything is real and the artificial is rejected. Such men and women find a warm welcome among these men and are made to enjoy themselves, to feel that they are among friends and well wishers, and so those who go to Shin Pond always come away feeling well paid for their visit and determined to return later, which is why it is said to you:

You ought to go to Shin Pond!

Canoe Voyages
Through Wooded Water Ways
The Numerous Trips Which Are Increasingly Popular For Vacationists In The Maine Woods

The vast vacation country reached by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad offers a wide variety of attractions—hunting big game, good bird shooting, the finest fishing in the world, mountain climbing—all these are in the catalogue of joy for the comer to the Maine Woods, but for a number of devotees, o’ertopping all in popularity probably, are the canoe trips through the many and diverse woodland waterways which form a far spreading network over the map of Maine. These lakes and rivers and picturesque streams were navigated by the canoes of the aboriginal redskins before our history began and later, when the French pioneers entered upon the stage for the fascinating drama of colonial days, rivers now the delight of vacation canoeists were the avenues of travel between populous military strongholds and distant outposts and were the connecting links for the Indian villages of the tribes that were native to Maine and Canada. So, despite the fact that attainment to the present popularity of canoe trips is comparatively recent, the cruises through these waters have been going on for centuries. That the primitive canoe is now a greater favorite than ever before is one of the paradoxes of the times.
There are many canoe trips in the Maine Woods but the most famous canoe cruises are the Allagash trip, which covers 203 miles; the trip down the Penobscot’s West Branch, a distance of 80 miles; the trip through the waters of the East Branch of the Penobscot, 118 miles from start to finish; and the long voyage down the St. John River, which means covering 231 miles. The canoe trip offers the ideal vacation and it provides a combination of pleasures that cannot be duplicated by any other form of outing. The popularity of canoeing is evidenced by the hundreds of men and women who yearly make canoe cruises through waters of the Maine Woods.

When a Maine Woods canoe cruise is planned it means an excursion over waters which lead through territories abounding with scenic delights; it affords the finest form of out-door recreation with plenty of chance for "roughing it" if this is desired, and for the man or woman who wants to fish, these canoe trips through the country traversed by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad open the way to lakes and streams which are far famed. Canoe trips have long been popular with the men and women for whom a vacation in the woods is the regular event, and recent years have brought increasing popularity for canoeing among women.

Many parties of women, business and professional women and teachers and their students make the canoe trips through the Allagash, West Branch and other waters each season as regularly as the summer comes. Canoe trips mean a certain amount of "roughing it," and it is because of this opportunity for getting close to nature that they have so many enthusiastic devotees. The system has been developed so finely in the Maine Woods that all the details of a trip, the matter of supplies, camping outfit, canoes and guide can be arranged in advance so that everything is in readiness for starting out on a day decided upon. The Vacation Bureau of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad at Bangor makes a specialty of arrangements for canoe trips. With the information in hand as to the size of the party and the length of time to be given to the trip, various outlines of canoe trips will be supplied, together with carefully approximated estimates about expenses and other matters. One thing is practically certain and this is, that once a canoe cruise has been made through the Maine Woods, thereafter it will be regarded as the vacation unexcelled.

THE ALLAGASH TRIP — MOST FAMOUS OF ALL

The Allagash canoe trip is admittedly the most famous of all excursions through forest waterways. It starts at Northeast Carry, on the Penobscot's West Branch, and ends at Fort Kent on the St. John River, a splendid cruise of more than two hundred miles. The Allagash trip is distinguished not only because of the almost endless stretch of fine scenery which it unfolds, but also on account of the many opportunities for the choicest fishing in the lakes and streams enroute and because it offers extraordinary opportunities for partaking of the manifold pleasures of the real woods vacation. The Allagash trip is without doubt the finest canoe trip of the continent. It is made annually by hundreds of men and women, who look forward to the outing as a regular and not-to-be-omitted event of the year.

Northeast Carry, the starting point for the Allagash trip, is reached by the way of Moosehead Lake. Northeast Carry is one of Moosehead’s extremities. The “carry” is two miles across the ridge which separates the waters of the Penobscot and Kennebec rivers. For the Allagash trip the canoe goes into the Penobscot’s West Branch and then there are twenty miles to be covered before Chesuncook Lake is reached.

Ten miles from Northeast Carry is the “Halfway House,” a favorite camping spot if the start is made in the afternoon. In the second ten-mile course, Moosehead, Ragmuff and Pine streams are passed and then the canoe enters Chesuncook Lake, a fine expanse of water. At the head of Chesuncook is Umbazooksus Lake. It is a paddle of a mile over the lake to a carry of a couple of miles.

At the carry, Tom Henderson’s team transports the canoes overland. At the end of the carry is Mud Pond, and then there is a mile stretch down the outlet to Chamberlain Lake. It is a paddle of six miles to the head of Chamberlain Lake. After a short carry around the dam, the canoe goes into the stream for a short run to Eagle Lake. It is a ten-mile paddle over Eagle Lake, after which the canoe enters the thoroughfare of two miles connecting Eagle and Churchill Lakes.

Churchill Lake is five miles long; at its foot is Chase Carry, about a mile in length. At the end of the carry the canoe goes into the Allagash River for ten miles to Umsaskis Lake. Five miles over the lake and a thoroughfare leads into Long Lake, and then there is another five-mile stretch to the Allagash River and then it is a straight course of ten miles.

Round Pond is the next interruption in the course, and it is three miles over the pond to another entry into the Allagash for a fifteen-mile dash to Allagash Falls. At the falls, the canoe is taken out for a short carry, and it goes into the river below the falls.

After the falls are passed it is smooth going to St. Francis, the point of confluence of the Allagash and St. John Rivers. Although St. Francis is the actual terminus of the Allagash trip, it is generally continued down the St. John River to Fort Kent. At St. Francis, the Bangor & Aroostook train may be taken to Fort Kent and thence to Bangor or to other points. There is also railroad connection between Fort Kent and Van Buren and the trip is interesting as it skirts the border line and follows closely the banks of the St. John River.

On both sides of the St. John River the towns are inhabited largely by French-speaking people who are descendants of the early Acadian settlers. The picturesque villages are quite unlike the typical New England town and never fail to interest tourists.
Visitors to Van Buren should not miss going down to the Grand Falls of the St. John River, appropriately called, "the Niagara of the East," and well worth the time it takes as the falls are only a dozen miles away.

For a canoe trip down the Allagash, it is customary to take tent, provisions, cooking utensils and other necessaries and then go into camp whenever night or the inclination to get ashore overtakes the canoeist. There are numerous good camping places with clear springs for drinking water, and surroundings that are alluring, and, too, there are various camps along the Allagash where provisions may be secured if the supply is running low and where, if desired, meals and lodging may be had. These camps are:

Joe Smith's, the Half Way House, about ten miles from Northeast Carry.
Ansel B. Smith's, at the head of Chesuncook Lake.
The Lincoln Pulpwood Company's Camp at the Chamberlain Farm on Chamberlain Lake.
W. H. Cunliffe & Sons' Camp on Umsaskis Lake.
J. T. Michaud's Farm, about two miles before reaching Allagash Falls.
Thomas Gardner's Camp at the junction of the Allagash and St. John Rivers.

As in the case of all Maine Woods canoe excursions, the Allagash voyage offers numerous "side trips" to the canoeist. One of the most popular is the Allagash Lake Trip, which leads through Caucogomoc and Allagash Lakes. At the head of Chesuncook Lake, instead of continuing up Umbazooksus Stream, the canoe is headed in a northwesterly course into Caucogomoc Lake, thence through the dead-water for four miles into Round Pond. Between Round Pond and Allagash Lake there is a carry of three miles. At the carry, Tom Henderson's team will transport the canoes overland. After the carry there is a paddle of four and a half miles over Allagash Lake. From the lake there is a run of seven miles by way of Allagash Stream to Chamberlain Lake.

The Allagash Lake trip is frequently taken for a short excursion when, as shown by the accompanying table, the route is reversed from the course taken for the big Allagash trip.

CANOEING DOWN THE WEST BRANCH

Starting point, Northeast Carry, Moosehead Lake.
Terminus, Norcross, at the foot of North Twin Lake.
Distance, 80 Miles. Time, from four to seven days.

For a half a century or more one of the most popular of the many fine routes open to the vacationists in the Maine Woods is the canoe cruise down the Penobscot's West Branch. The popularity of the West Branch cruise is due to the comparatively short time in which it can be made, an important consideration forced upon many vacationists, and also by the fact of the many scenic attractions. Then, too, men and women who want to fish enroute will find good fishing waters easily reached from the main course and on all sides are the pleasant camping places.

The start for the West Branch trip is made at Northeast Carry, reached from Moosehead Lake. The canoe goes into the West Branch waters at the carry and it is a picturesque course down the West Branch for twenty miles to Chesuncook Lake. Midway on the West Branch, between Northeast Carry and the entrance to Chesuncook, is the Half Way House, which is a favorite camping place, particularly if the start is made from Northeast Carry in the afternoon. When Chesuncook Lake is reached the canoeist decides whether the distance of eighteen miles down the lake will be paddled or whether advantage will be taken of the steamboat transportation. Chesuncook and Ripogenus Lake are now one.

At the foot of Ripogenus Lake, one of the world's greatest water storage dams, there is a carry and arrangements can be made for transporting of canoes and dunnage over land. At the end of the carry the canoe is put into West Branch again at a point known as the Big Eddy. Upper Umbajackamegus Falls are encountered shortly and the canoe goes through this quick water, but at the "lower" falls it is necessary to carry for half a mile.

The "Horse Race" is a succession of swift pitches, about two and a half miles in extent, and if conditions are favorable the canoes generally go through these rapids with passengers aboard. Occasionally the water is sufficiently turbulent to make the passengers choose the path which runs along the bank while the guide negotiates the current, and at other times low water makes some extra carrying. At the end of the Horse Race the canoe goes through Sourdnahunk Deadwater to the dam at the foot of Sourdnahunk Stream, where there is a small carry. Four miles down the West Branch are Abol Falls, which makes necessary another short carry. Then the canoe goes into a straight course down the river to Pockwockamus Falls. At the falls there is a carry to Pockwockamus Deadwater and then it is clear traveling to Debsconeag Falls, where the West Branch takes a drop thirty or so feet, and these falls make necessary still another carry. At Passamagomac Falls there is the last carry of the trip and then there is a clear stretch into Ambajejus Lake.

When the head of Ambajejus Lake is reached, steamboats may be boarded for the trip down Ambajejus Lake to Pemadumcook Lake, thence to North Twin Lake to Norcross, the terminus of the West Branch canoe trip. At Norcross there is a hotel where clothes may be changed and preparations made for the trip home by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad.

The West Branch canoe trip is over a route abounding in some of the finest scenery and offering attractions which are hard to equal. There are many opportunities for side-trips for fishing, hunting and camping out along the West Branch cruise. Fishing and canoeing waters along the West Branch canoe route include Caribou, Cuxabexis, Caucomgomac Lake, the Hurd Ponds, Rainbow Lake, First, Second and Third Debsconeag Lakes. From third Debsconeag Lake there is a passage to the head of Pemadumcook, and from Pemadumcook can be reached
Jo Mary Stream to Jo Mary Lake. The Jo Mary waters have long been renowned in hunting and fishing circles. Millinocket Lake, reached from Ambejejus Lake is another favorite with fishermen. Two streams which are popular with the angling fraternity are Aboljackamegus and Aboljackamesesis streams which flow into the West Branch in the vicinity of Abol Falls.

From Abol there is a fine trail to Mt. Katahdin which is much used by mountain-climbers. Getting to famous Mt. Katahdin by the way of the West Branch, whether the start is made at Northeast Carry or at Ripogenus, reached by the “short-cut” by way of Lily Bay and Kojad-jo, means adding to the delights of a Katahdin trip all the pleasures and exhilarating experiences of canoeing and camping.

Two short and popular canoe trips are the Pine Pond and Lobster Lake trips from Northeast Carry. The Pine Pond trip leads down the West Branch from Northeast Carry for seventeen miles, when a turn to the east is made up Pine Stream for eight miles into Pine Pond. This is a picturesque excursion and offers opportunity for good fishing.

Lobster Lake is considered to be one of the most beautiful in the Maine Woods, and is easily reached from Northeast Carry. Only four miles down the West Branch from Northeast Carry is Lobster Stream and then it is four miles up the stream, an uncommonly beautiful woods' waterway, to Lobster Lake, most charming of Maine Woods basins, and considered by many authorities to be one of the out-standing splendor spots of the Maine Woods.

THE CANOE VOYAGE DOWN THE EAST BRANCH

Starting point, Northeast Carry, Moosehead Lake.
Terminus, Grindstone on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad.
Distance, 120 Miles.
Time, from seven to ten days.

The canoe trip down the Penobscot's East Branch is longer than that down the West Branch and offers surroundings somewhat wilder than are found in the West Branch country. This cruise covers a distance of 120 miles and traverses some well-known Maine Woods waters, including Chesuncook and Chamberlain Lakes and the succession of pitches known as the Grand Falls of the East Branch.

The start for the East Branch trip is from Northeast Carry. The course is twenty miles down the West Branch to Chesuncook Lake. Instead of turning south down Chesuncook, as in the case of the West Branch trip, the canoe is headed north.
and leaves Chesuncook by Umbazooksus Stream for a run of nine miles to Umbazooksus Lake. From the lake the route leads to Mud Pond Carry and thence into Mud Pond, which is the first dip into the waters of the East Branch. It is three miles over Mud Pond to Chamberlain Lake and a paddle of five miles over Chamberlain brings the canoe to the thoroughfare leading to Telosmis, and after Telosmis comes Telos Lake. Telos is a favorite camping place because of the favorable surroundings and from there side trips are often taken into Sourdnahunk Lake. A canal connects Telos with Webster Lake and if there is a good pitch of water this will afford a passage to the canoe.

From Webster Lake to Grand Falls the water is sufficiently rough to make necessary taking out the canoe for a mile overland by tote team. When the canoe is into the water again, there is good going to Second Lake, four miles long, and for another four-mile stretch over Grand Lake. From Grand Lake there is a five-mile run of rough water which means vigorous paddling to Stairs Falls, but after the falls are passed, there is a smooth run to Haskell Rock Pitch, where there is another carry.

The Grand Falls of the East Branch are composed of the series of pitches which are encountered in the next four miles. Pond Pitch comes first, then Grand Pitch, the third is the Hulling Machine Pitch and last is Bowlin Falls. If wind and water conditions are right, the canoe is navigable through the swift current between the pitches, but each of the pitches except Bowlin means a carry. At certain seasons, and under extraordinary conditions, it may be necessary to carry around Bowlin, but generally it can be gone through without damage or accident.

From Bowlin there is a stretch of good canoeing for a distance of fifteen miles, which brings the canoe to the point of junction of the Wissataquoik and the East Branch. The Wissataquoik offers a pleasant side trip up its sixteen miles of length, and the Sebois, which comes into the East Branch just above the Wissataquoik’s place of confluence, flows through a justly celebrated hunting country.

From the mouth of the Wissataquoik it is only a dozen miles to Grindstone. In covering this stretch there are the Whetstone, Burntland and Grindstone Falls to be encountered. Under favorable conditions the canoe can get through without a carry, but unless the pitch of water is exceptional, it is more than likely that Whetstone will be unnavigable even if the other two are.

The East Branch canoe trip is a favorite among fishermen because its waters are famous for the prizes they yield and the sport provided by the trout favors for gameness is a strong lure to East Branch waters.

THE CRUISE DOWN THE ST. JOHN

Starting Point, Northwest Carry.
Terminus, Grand Falls, N. B.
Distance, about 231 Miles.
Time, 3 to 5 weeks.

The St. John River canoe cruise traverses territory which is veritable virgin forest and is the longest cruise through Maine
Woods waters. It opens up to the voyager a really "wild" country and in the course of the two hundred and thirty-one miles that are covered by the trip there are several opportunities to exhibit canoeing skill. Some of the stretches of rough water can be classed as hazardous and should be negotiated with extreme care, but for the canoeist of experience, these passages calling for skill and a certain amount of daring add zest to the splendid St. John cruise.

The following paragraphs are reprinted from a story in a former issue of "In the Maine Woods," contributed by Professor W. K. Moorehead, of Andover, Mass., equally famed as an archaeologist and a lover of the outdoor life. Professor Moorehead is a devotee of the Maine Woods and is particularly enthusiastic over the canoe trip down the St. John. His account of the St. John cruise is regarded as the most authoritative guide.

This is Professor Moorehead's description:

"I do not know that the distance has been measured, therefore some of my estimates may not be correct. From Northwest Carry to the West Branch is two miles — good road. Proceed up the West Branch to Pittston Farms (mostly dead-water), where is the supply camp of the Great Northern Paper Company. Here the stream forks, and you proceed by the north branch of the West Branch about twenty miles to Doyle Brook. There, canoes can be poled part of the way, but must be dragged the rest of the distance.

"From Doyle Brook to the Bog Lake Dam is at least fifteen and possibly twenty miles. This is called Abaconetic Bog. It is five miles from this bog through a sluggish winding stream to the head of the river where used to live two French-Canadians in a small cabin. These two men maintain the carry. Canoes have to be dragged the last two miles. From this cabin to St. John Pond is five or six miles over hills. From St. John Pond, it is twenty miles to Baker Lake. The stream is small. It is necessary to drag the canoes part of the way. At Baker Lake there is an old lumber camp, but it is not in very good condition. After leaving Baker Lake it is about twenty miles to Morrison Depot Camp, where campers can be put up if desired.

"Here the river is a little larger and swifter. About ten miles from Morrison's Camp the southwest branch of the St. John comes in. This is a very good game country and there are also many trout. There are no houses or buildings until one reaches Seven Islands. It must be forty miles from the forks of the river to the mouth of the Southwest Branch. The water is swift and can be run in a day, but I advise spending three days, as there is much to see. Through this region one can find beaver dams by ascending side streams.

"From Seven Islands to the mouth of the Big Black River the distance must be eighteen or twenty miles, and there are bad rapids above the mouth of the Big Black River. I advise stopping several days at the mouth of the Big Black River, as there one finds good fishing and hunting. Here the river is larger and swift. From the mouth of the Big Black River to the mouth of the Allagash must be nearly forty miles. There are two or three houses on a high bank to the left, and I would advise that one of the French-Canadians who live there be secured to guide the party through the channels. At certain stages of water different courses are taken, hence you need some one who knows the channels. It would be easy to upset canoes in these waters and therefore, if canoeists are not experts, they must proceed with caution.

"From the mouth of the Allagash on down to St. Francis (about fifteen miles) there are houses here and there, and accommodation can be secured by those who do not care to set up tents. My advice to canoeists would be to go slowly through and not hurry, and spend three weeks in journeying from Northwest Carry to St. Francis, which must be, counting all the turns in the river, distant at least two hundred and twenty-five miles from St. John Pond. From St. Francis on to the Grand Falls, the river is large and beautiful and there are houses and settlements along the banks. The distance to be traveled after reaching St. Francis is optional. The canoeist can stop at towns or farms every few miles or he can make longer runs and reach Grand Falls in a week.

"Side trips up the Tobique, the St. Francis and the Big Black are recommended. The upper river is more charming than the lower. It is an absolute forest, free from the haunts and habitations of man, — is that upper St. John."

NORTH AROOSTOOK CANOE TRIPS

The Fish River system of lakes and streams, away up north in the very peak of Maine, are among the newer waters in the catalogue of canoe cruises offered to the comers to the Maine Woods. This region is growing in favor from every point of view and is vividly famous for its uncommonly fine fishing, for the big game which frequents the locality, and for the noteworthy and rugged scenery which is characteristic of this stretch of country.

Van Buren, one of the terminal points of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, is a starting point for a canoeing excursion through the Fish River basin. From Van Buren it is a twelve-mile drive to Long Lake, a magnificent sheet of water, which is the point of embarkation. It is a paddle of eight miles to the thoroughfare leading to Mud Lake, less than a mile away. From Mud Lake, two miles long, there is a thoroughfare of a mile, ending at Cross Lake. There is a stretch of four miles to Cross Lake and then there is another thoroughfare into Square Lake. Four miles on Square Lake and four miles more in a thoroughfare and Eagle Lake is entered.

THE KOKAD-JO CANOE ROUTE

The splendid automobile highway from Lily Bay, on Moosehead Lake, to Ripogenus offers a new itinerary for the canoeist, as this highway gives an automobile approach to Chesuncook as well as to Ripogenus. Canoeists can take a Coburn steamboat to Lily Bay and from there can go by special auto or by the Great Northern Paper Company’s "jitney" to either Chesuncook or Ripogenus, and at these points a start may be made for canoe trips—up Chesuncook for the Allagash trip or down the West Branch waters, if Katahdin or Norcross are the destinations.

The forest boulevard runs past Kokad-Jo, through the Grant Farm, one of the Great Northern Paper Company’s important supply stations, and on to Ripogenus.
Game Hunting
With A Camera
An Interesting Chapter by a Maine Woods Devotee Who Tells of His Success In Wild-Life Photography

By Dr. Charles M. Whitney

The chief object of a vacation trip to the woods is to find health and recreation, and the latter is best secured by having some especial interest which affords mental stimulation with physical rest. Hence it is that one person is fond of fishing, another of hunting, and still another finds his enjoyment in gliding in a canoe along the shaded rivers amid scenes of ever-changing beauty.

To these may be added another and somewhat newer pastime; namely, the photography of wild life, of deer and moose, or of any animal or bird that makes its home in the wilderness country. At first sight, this would seem to be an easy task, merely to find the animals, and then take their pictures, but from sixteen years' experience in this delightful sport, the writer can testify that it is not so simple as it appears. If one supposes that all he has to do is to get a guide and canoe and go where deer are numerous, and when he sights a buck or a doe to paddle up to it and take its picture, he has a little surprise coming to him, for these wild and wary animals have ideas of their own on the subject of the human race.

They are not in the habit of waiting the photographer’s pleasure, but as soon as he sees them they also see him or get his scent, and scamper away to safety. And yet, excellent pictures can be taken if one will devote to its accomplishment the time and patience required.

The subject is so large that what follows will be limited to the methods which the writer has found most useful in the photography of deer in its natural home. As equipment, a camera of the reflecting type with a focal plane shutter will be found satisfactory because the view finder shows the whole size of the picture which is most useful in getting a deer in good pose and focus.

A non-astigmatic lens of a focal length of seven to ten inches will give definition and a good-sized image.

For the amateur, and this article is written for them by one of them, films in rolls of six exposures are best because they are light to carry, unbreakable, and can be developed in the woods by the tank method.

As this can easily be done in daylight, it makes one of the finest occupations for a rainy day, and one can see his results while still in the field where his enthusiasm is greatest. He knows at once what luck he has had, and does not have to wait till he gets home.

A telephoto lens is excellent in theory, but in the writer’s experience it is practically useless, for it is too slow for game.

Two methods of securing game pictures are to be considered, that by daylight or by flashlight, but this article will consider only the former.

To get pictures, one must go where deer are very numerous, and because they will not permit us to go to them, we must make them come to us.

To do this, it is necessary to make a blind and wait behind it until the deer slowly feed up to it and one can select the proper time to get a natural pose.

For a blind, one should take advantage of any natural shelter, a bunch of small firs or the upturned roots of trees, but if one is constructed, it should correspond to the rest of the surroundings, for otherwise the animal will quickly notice it. Deer depend for their safety upon a most wonderful sense of smelling and keen hearing. They have also sharp eyes for distant objects like a canoe approaching.

Two factors must never be forgotten in game photography, the direction of the wind and light. If the wind is wrong, not only are no pictures obtained, but you do not even see the animals for they get the human scent and do not come out. The light must be from the back or side. It is hardly worth while to go out very early in blind work, for the sun is so low that it casts a shadow along the shores, and the picture is not good.

Behind the blind one sits watching for a deer to come out, passing the time with a good book and cigar. When it appears, the fun begins. It feeds along the shore on the water-grass or lily pads which have blown in, and gradually approaching nearer and nearer, raising its head every minute or two to see if any danger threatens, and soon may come within thirty or forty feet.

Up comes its head in an attractive pose, snap goes the camera, and the picture is ours. If there is any more exciting fun than watching a moose or deer come within forty feet of you and waiting for the right minute to take a picture, I am sure I do not know what it is.

For thrills and wild excitement it has shooting beaten to death, for you have to work so close. Imagine a big buck, deer, or moose only two canoe lengths away and looking in your face, and think what would happen to your nerves if you took your eyes from the view finder; just the worst case of nervous shakes you ever had, and while you are steadying down, away goes the animal and its picture. Hence it is good business to keep the eyes fixed on the view finder until the picture is snapped.

If we sit quietly behind a blind, we learn a lot of little secrets of the home life of the deer. We find out why it is that we see so many does apparently without fawns, for while the mother is feeding, we see a fawn peeking out of the bushes where the mother has tucked him away for safety. I remember well one day while hidden behind my blind seeing a very naughty boy disobey his mother by coming out where she was. Each time she made a rush for him, striking at him with her fore foot, and back into the wood he would run. In a little while he would peek out again and then gradually work his way out to his mother and again she would make a dash for him and drive him back. At least six or seven times this little comedy of the woods was repeated, and it well paid me for my failure to get any pictures that day. Often one will see a big cow moose feeding in the water and nothing else in sight, but every now and again she raises her head and gives a low grunt. If you look closely and are lucky, you may see curled up on the shore a little rascal of a calf moose to whom his mother is talking in her maternal moose language.

The possibility that a deer or moose may step noiselessly out of the woods in front of you is what makes the long hours of patient waiting pass so pleasantly. Around you is stretched the limitless forest of evergreen trees, with here and there the lighter green of the maple or birch.

The wind sighs softly through the trees, the water laps in soft cadence against the rocks, while above in freedom the big white gulls circle, filling the air with their plaintive cries.

A mother duck with her brood of little feathered puff-balls swims by in utter ignorance that snugly hidden behind his blind sits her fancied enemy. In a long line, headed by the watchful mother, the little brood goes by to seek its daily meal.

When waiting behind a blind becomes monotonous, a little hunting in a canoe is a pleasing change. When the wind and light are right, one can paddle along the dead waters and watch for the deer around the bends of the stream. The seat should be nearly on the level with the rail of the canoe, and as the animal is approached the guide should turn the canoe away from the side from which the camera points, otherwise the bow out of focus, fills the greater part of the picture.
A background of water or space behind the deer is desirable, for the image of a bright red deer against a dark background as seen in the view finder is very deceptive, for the film only registers black and white, and all contrast is gone.

The hunter with his gun may enjoy photography without giving up any of his favorite sport, for after he has secured his legal limit of game he can change his weapons and hunt with the camera, and he will find it exciting enough and difficult enough to give him all the interest he needs.

One never tires of this most exhilarating and interesting pastime, for the fun never ends. If successful he has a trophy to be proud of, if he has had bad luck in getting pictures, he has had the fun of trying, and has taken keen pleasure in matching his wits against the sagacity and wariness of these wild creature of the beautiful woods.

Here is Pictorial Proof that Deer Are Plentiful in the Maine Woods
(PhotobyDr.CharlesM.Whitney)
Hunting Big Game
In the B&A Country
No Section Offers Finer Sport Than The Section Reached by the Bangor & Aroostook

For the sportsman who goes in for big game hunting, the Maine woods and the forests of New Brunswick, just over the border from Maine and in reality one and the same unbroken stretch of primeval country, offer opportunities which continue to attract hundreds of hunters each season. The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad and the connecting Canadian railways, give direct access to this vast game country abounding in deer, moose and caribou, and now a hunting trip which, not so long ago, meant many inconveniences and hard travel, can be made comfortably and quickly. Until this superior railroad service was effected, getting to the Restigouche country, for instance, was no easy task, but now this section, renowned for moose and caribou, is accessible without difficulty or delay. This combination game country, wide expanse of forest, broken only by the St. John River and the stretch of small towns on both its banks, is unquestionably one of the outstanding game centers of the continent.

Now, in addition to all the old-time Maine game sections— Moosehead Lake, Katahdin Iron Works, Norcross, the country surrounding Mt. Katahdin, Patten, Ashland, the section in the locality of the Fish River waters — there is offered the hunter through the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad service, the unrivalled possibilities in the Restigouche region and the other game centers between the St. John River and Bay Chaleur. Getting to the Restigouche region, formerly required no end of time but now it is easily reached by the way of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad and its connections. The sportsman in Philadelphia or New York or Boston can take a night train from New York or Boston and if you travel by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, you can reach practically all points in the Maine Woods before the next day. If Restigouche is the objective, the arrival at Van Buren will be in time for mid-day dinner. The remainder of the day and night can be enjoyed at the Hotel Hammond, an exceptional hotel for a town of Van Buren’s size, and a side trip can be made to Grand Falls, the Niagara of the St. John River. Start may be made for the Restigouche or other points in New Brunswick in good season the following morning.

The Maine moose now protected for a period of years of close time, have long been noted for their size, the spread of antlers, and for the sport which they provided for the hunter who pursued them. In the summer, moose are frequently seen by the canoeists and when they are at the water’s edge or perhaps feeding on lily pads or taking a cool plunge to rid themselves of the troublesome black fly, they give opportunity for getting the coveted moose snapshot which is one of the prize souvenirs of a woods vacation. Because moose are now protected in Maine by close time laws the only shooting of moose that can be done lawfully is with a camera.

Maine deer have always been celebrated because of their size, and Maine deer heads are the finest trophies. The fine moose and caribou hunting in the Restigouche region is unsurpassed this side of the Rocky Mountains. For sport in Maine, next to deer, come the big black bears, which are multiplying rapidly since the removal of the bounty. Maine bears exceed five hundred pounds in weight, and notwithstanding their apparent clumsiness, they are crafty and quick to elude pursuers, so that to bring one down indicates skill as a hunter. Foxes, red, gray and black, are frequently shot, and bobcat and lynx are not uncommon. Along the shores of streams, mink, otter and fisher are frequently found.

The bird hunter will find partridges in great plentitude, and another chapter in this book tells of the great increase in partridge in recent years. Other game include woodcock, snipe, black ducks, mallards, sheldrakes and wild geese.

During the summer season deer are frequently seen in streams and coves, some canoeists having counted them by dozens during extended cruises. With the departure of summer and the approach of cooler weather, the deer take to traveling. Before long leaves begin to fall, the autumnal dryness prevails and the woods become more or less "noisy." The deer, alert for every sound, takes flight at the rustling of twigs or perhaps the crack of the dry leaves and is off in a twinkling.

October rains result in the leaves and underbrush getting well wetdown, there is less crackling, and conditions are materially changed. The coming of the early snow means even greater advantage for the huntsman on the trail for moose or deer. Then it is easier to know the presence of game and to follow their tracks. Some bucks weigh as high as three hundred pounds and no handsomer specimens are to be found than in the Maine Woods. A Maine buck is a trophy worthy of pride.

There is a table of figures printed elsewhere in the book showing the amount of game shipments from various stations and gateways. It should be remembered as a matter of fairness, that some stations are shipping points for a wide range of game land, while others send down deer and moose shot in the immediate vicinity. Norcross receives and ships game for the entire lower Penobscot West Branch country and Greenville for points in all directions, covering an area of two thousand square miles. The game from the East Branch country comes out at Grindstone, while Stacyville is the shipping point for the region around Katahdin and from the East Branch territory; and so it is with other stations.

Bird Shooting
In the Maine Woods
Partridges Are on the Increase and Offer Fine Sport. Woodcock and Ducks Are Plentiful Also

THANKS to a whim of Mother Nature which has resulted in mild and uncommonly dry springtimes for the past several years in Maine, conditions have been extraordinarily favorable for the young partridge. Consequently the number of birds, particularly in the “big woods,” surpasses records for many years, indeed, old woodsmen say probably never before have partridge been so plentiful in the Maine Woods as at the present time. This is good news for the bird hunters with whom this vacation country reached by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad has long been popular. In addition to partridge hunting there is also the fine sport of woodcock and black duck shooting.

The partridge has a hard time to survive the chicken stage under ordinary weather conditions normal to Maine. Due to the extremely mild springs the mortality among young birds has been exceedingly low and now the Maine Woods, always a favorite partridge country, is many times better than heretofore. The “big woods” partridge is quite another bird from the shy, suspicious, quick-flying partridge which are hunted in the neighborhood of towns or settlements. The partridge of forest is comparatively tame but this does not mean he doesn’t provide sport for the hunter who uses his rifle instead of a shotgun. Partridge shooting with a rifle is real sport. It calls for the most skilled marksmanship and is something entirely apart from using the shotgun. A high powdered rifle, if the bird is shot in the body, will, naturally, blow a partridge into shreds. The sport comes in shooting the partridge in the head which makes a clean hit, if successful, and means that the bird’s body is unharmed. For the woman who wants to try her skill with the rifle, there is no better test than partridge hunting with a 22-rifle and the woman who can “crown” a partridge is entitled to a badge of merit.

There is good partridge shooting over a bird dog during the first two weeks in November. Then the partridge is oftentimes found in open country, feeding on alders and clover. The partridge flies seventy-five to ninety feet a second. In alertness and sagacity it is unsurpassed by bird or beast, and to bring down a partridge requires, on the part of the bird hunter, quickness, sureness and agility of decision. Then it is a matter of less than seconds to swing the gun to the shoulder, unlock the safety and pull the trigger. It is all over in much less time than it takes to tell of the process. There is good partridge hunting with a tree dog throughout the bird-hunting season, but this sport is not considered in the same class with wing shooting over a bird dog. Bird hunters compare wing shooting with fly-fishing and hunting with a tree-dog to “plug” fishing.

Woodcock hunting is a premier form of sport in the Maine Woods. The woodcock is well named “the bird of mystery.” The Maine woodcock is the same gamy little bird that is known variously in the southern states as the brier-snipe, the swamp-snipe, and the ghost bird. Wherever found the woodcock has the same characteristics. No bird hunter, however well versed in the art, pretends to know the woodcock, but every hunter recognizes woodcock-hunting as the premier form of sport.

The best season for woodcock shooting is from the 10th to the 25th of October; at least, this period averages well over a period of years. The woodcock follow the valleys of streams and rivers in their line of flight, instead of flying as “the crow flies,” reach the coast by following the rivers to sea and thence on their migration to the equatorial region. The woodcock is a small bird, hardly larger than the robins. It feeds almost wholly on worms and does its eating at night. In the daytime it is drowsing in the fields and open stretches and when it is come upon by the dog it is slow to shake off its napping. It is in this drowsy stage that the hunter gets his point and prize.

and Save Trouble

Regulations Covering Fishing and Hunting Are Important Information for Comers to the Maine Woods

Before starting on your fishing or hunting trip, unless you are already familiar with them, make sure to read the Maine Fish and Game Laws. This is important especially for fishermen as there are numerous waters having special regulations. Copies of the Maine Fish and Game Laws may be had by applying to the Commissioner of Inland Fisheries and Game, Augusta, Maine. The following paragraphs cover some of the important rules:

BIG GAME
Caribou and Moose protected at all times.
Deer—Open season in Aroostook, Penobscot, Piscataquis, Somerset, Franklin, and Oxford Counties, October 1st to November 30th, both days inclusive.
Two deer: one of which must be a buck with antlers; (a “spikehorn” is not considered a deer with antlers); the law further provided that not more than one female deer can be killed in one season.
Deer cannot be sold or given away to be taken out of the State.
A resident of Maine cannot carry or transport any deer out of the State.

ALL SUNDAY HUNTING PROHIBITED
Sunday is closed season on all wild birds and wild animals.
It is closed season on wild birds from sunset to one-half hour before sunrise of the following morning; and on wild animals from one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise of the following morning, except night hunting of raccoons and skunks is legal from September 1st to October 31st.
Hunting with automobile or jack light illegal. Unlawful to carry loaded rifle or shotgun in an automobile, or cartridge in magazine thereof.
Dogs must not be used in hunting deer.
Unlawful to use silencers in firearms.
Game Laws

Partridge and Woodcock — Open season during October and November. Ducks, Brant and Geese, Coots, Gallinules and Jacksnipe or Wilson Snipe — Open season September 16th to December 31st inc.

Daily limit on Game Birds — No person can Kill, Have in Possession or Transport in any one day more than five Partridges. (Season limit on Partridge, 25) 6 Woodcock; 10 Ducks, 10 Snipe and 5 Plover. (Federal law limit, 8 Geese, 8 Brant, 25 Rails, Coots and Gallinules; Plover and Yellow legs, 15 in all).

Hunting Licenses

Fee for a non-resident to hunt in any county up to time deer season begins in that county $5; to hunt deer and other wild animals (except moose) and birds during deer season $15; a $5 license may be exchanged for a $15 license upon payment of $10. Licensee may transport out of Maine by common carrier, under tags detached from license, two deer, ten ducks, six woodcock and five partridge which he has legally killed, by presenting game and hunting license to agent of common carrier, whereupon agent, after identifying shipper as holder of license, will detach proper tags from license and attach same to the game and it will go along to its destination without further looking after on the part of the owner. When game is transported by motor vehicle, or any conveyance other than by common carrier, game must be identified and tag approved by a game warden or the Commissioner.

Non-resident hunters must be in charge of a registered guide during the months of May to November, inclusive, when camping or kindling fires in unorganized or unincorporated townships while hunting. No guide can guide or be employed at the same time by more than five non-residents in hunting. (Same requirement as to guides applies to non-resident fishermen.)

Residents and Non-residents must carry hunting license while having firearms in possession.

Non-residents must carry fishing license while having fishing tackle in possession. Same provision applies to Alien residents who are required to procure fishing license.

Residents must accompany game to their home when shipping either by common carrier (express) or automobile, and must identify same at a game inspection station. Many additional game inspection stations will be named this year for convenience of hunters.

Resident can ship game under special tag (without accompanying same) to his home or to a hospital in the State.

Daily Limit

In waters governed by the general law, daily limit is 15 pounds of fish in all, or not exceeding 25 fish, even though the 25 fish caught weigh less than 15 pounds.

NOTE: — There are many exceptions to the general laws which will be found in detail in book containing full text of the Inland Fish and Game Laws which will be available for distribution about July 9th 1921. These books can be obtained by applying to the Fish and Game Departments, Augusta, Maine. This book should be consulted in order to ascertain which waters the special laws apply to.

Fishing Licenses

Non-resident fishing license fee, $3.15; alien resident license, $2.15. This latter law applies to all unnaturalized, foreign born residents who are not tax payers upon real estate in Maine and who have not resided in Maine for two years continuously previous to the time they desire to fish.

Transportation of Fish

Shipments of fish must be accompanied by owner unless shipped under special tag, which permits shipment of ten pounds of fish, or one fish, to home of owner or to a hospital in this State.

Shipment under special tag (fee for Special Tag $1) authorized once in five days except in case of fish taken in the Rangeley waters, where shipment is authorized once in thirty days.

ANOTHER VIEW OF
KATANDIN FALLS
WAY, way up on the precipitous walls of the West Basin of Mt. Katahdin you can see a filament of white, bold in relief against the grey rock and black spruce. It is Katahdin Falls, a thing of beauty little visited by man. In dry weather a tiny cataract, but a leaping torrent after rain has fallen on the mountain.

And so one day last summer, Moreland Lyon and the writer started from York’s Camps on Daisy Pond, where, by the way, you get the best view of the mountain and this waterfall, and hit the trail on the old Millinocket tote road as far as Katahdin Stream, about a mile and a half from camp. Here we turned to the left without crossing the stream and worked along this wonderfully beautiful brook, over old logging roads, up the wild valley through which Katahdin Brook cuts its turbulent course. For two miles we pushed through alders and bushes until at last we reached a ridge carpeted with deep moss and bearing an open forest of splendid spruce, so far, thank God, spared from the woodsman’s axe!

Open it was and charming in all its peaceful details. It almost seemed a profanation even to tread on that wonderful carpet or to speak aloud! On one side, far down in the deep channel cut among great boulders, tumbled the wildest brook in Maine, and on the other hand extended the glorious woods. There was no trail save that made by deer, so we wandered as we willed, sometimes in the very bed of the brook and again along the steep sides, working for the ridge top, and that velvet carpet of living green!

Up and up we climbed until an opening in the dense spruce tops showed we were right under "Owls Head" one of the frowning buttresses of the mighty Katahdin. Further along we emerged in full view of the falls, scarce a quarter of a mile away, yet still perched high on the sides of the rugged cliffs. And from this point until we gained the foot of the cataract we had plenty of hand-and-foot work to occupy our full attention.

Presently we reached the falls! And beyond all our expectations was this beautiful bit of a view! Higher than we thought, this tumbling stream must have leaped from a point fully two hundred feet above the pool into which it finally dashed. All around were ominous signs of recent rock-fall, for about us were trees broken and twisted and matted, showing that from the cliffs above recent rains had dislodged great boulders.

We carefully made our way up to the very head of the fall and stood entranced with its charm. Looking back down the valley through which we had come we had a glimpse of that plateau upon which Daisey Pond is placed and a forest sprinkled with glistening bodies of water.

From this waterfall diagonally to the table-land of Katahdin was not over a mile and we decided to follow a dried up water-course to our right and make the top of the mountain. We made it at last! But it took just four hours of climbing over, under, around and almost through boulders and rocks of titanic proportions, into and under and through tangled masses of roots and trees hopelessly tangled by rock-fall from the giant cliffs above! But we reached the table-land and then sat down on the rocks and made our tea! Was it refreshing? Did we need it? Well, rather!

And so we visited the falls and wandered back to camp over the Hunt Trail. We found a valley and a stream and a cataract so charming, so beautiful, we sensed the truth that one could wander far and wide without encountering anything half as lovely as this wild ravine, this tumbling brook that takes its source high up on the summit of Katahdin.
Mt. Katahdin, its wonderful scenic grandeur and the attractions it holds for a red-letter vacation, are related in the foregoing chapters. These paragraphs are to summarize the several routes by which Katahdin can be approached. It should not be forgotten that Maine has other mountains, humble neighbors, it is true, when compared with Katahdin, but offering, nevertheless, many possibilities for pleasant outings.

Perhaps the best known route for an ascent of Mt. Katahdin is the Abol Slide Trail which is also the shortest. This leads from Abol Stream, which can be reached by the canoe route down the West Branch, Abol Stream being about twelve miles below Ripogenus. If the start is from Norcross, the approach is by way of North Twin, Pemadamcook and Ambejejus Lakes, and thence up the West Branch to Abol Stream.

Hunt's Trail is another popular route. For this ascent the canoes are left at the mouth of Sourdnahunk Stream, two miles above Abol Stream, and then the tote-road is taken to York's Camp on Daisey Pond, a distance of four miles, or to Hunt's Camps, formerly conducted by I. O. Hunt, on Kidney Pond. From Hunt's to the table-land the distance is about six miles and from York's it is a mile less. The distance from Sourdnahunk Stream to the plateau is about eleven miles, and two miles brings the climber to Katahdin's summit.

The third route for ascending Katahdin is by the way of Stacyville. This route gives opportunity for some of the finest and also sportiest mountain climbing this side of the Rockies. The trip from Chimney Pond to Pamola, by way of the Knife Edge, for instance, is one of the very best of mountain-climbing stunts.

The Fishing Waters of the Maine Woods
The Attractions Offered in This paradise of Angling Delights

THAT there is no finer fishing the world over than in the lakes and streams of the Maine Woods is a fact acknowledged by all anglers. Not that there aren't places outside Maine where good sport can be found, but for supreme fishing under conditions ideal from every point of view there is no territory that surpasses this wonderland of vacation pleasures. Glance at the map of the country which the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad serves, attempt to count the lakes and rivers and streams or estimate the number of square miles of waterways and then recall the fact that practically every one of these is a fishing possibility — is there any doubting the statement that the Maine Woods are in reality the fishermen's paradise? As for the continuity of the fishing in Maine Woods waters; to be convinced that the sport is apparently inexhaustible it is only necessary to consider the many years that famous old Moosehead Lake has been a prime favorite with fishermen and then remember that Moosehead has never failed to maintain its annual high records both for size and number of prizes. Moosehead is still one of the favorite fishing waters for many anglers who are off for their favorite grounds the day the report
IN THE MAINE WOODS

Arrives that the "ice is out." But Moosehead is but one of the hundreds of waters in this premier territory. To catalogue the fishing possibilities in this country would mean an almost endless list. Sebec, for instance, is one of the original and best known land-locked salmon lakes and, too, in Sebec is some of the best fly-fishing for small-mouth black bass in June that can be found in Maine. And then there are Schoodic and the waters reached by the way of Norcross; the lakes and streams in the vicinity of Katahdin Iron Works offer fine sport and farther "up the line" are the Fish River Chain of Lakes and the head waters of the Aroostook which have come into fame recently and which are yearly yielding some of the handsomest prizes. There are dozens and dozens of other lakes and streams. Along the routes of the various canoe trips there are waters that are celebrated far and wide. If you have never been on a fishing trip to the Maine Woods you can choose almost any station on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad and you'll find that fishing waters are reachable without much additional travel.

Here's an important advantage of fishing in the Maine Woods country. There are so many waters and so variously located that it is possible to find continuous sport from early spring right through the summer until late in September. So cool are the spring-fed waters that even in the heat of mid-summer when fishing in most places is a thing of the past, it is possible to enjoy fly-fishing in many of these splendid waters. This is particularly noteworthy in the case of the up-north lakes and streams known as the Fish River chain of waters. This fine summer fishing which brings no end of favorable comment, particularly from anglers who have been disappointed in waters outside Maine, is explained by the fact that many of the lakes besides being spring-fed are of considerable altitude which means cool water despite the thermometer's high temperature.

The Vacation Bureau of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad has detailed information regarding fishing waters and you have but to give the time of your vacation to secure expert advice as to what locality is most favorable for the particular kind of fishing which you wish to enjoy. There are waters right at hand, and those far distant from the customary routes of travel, so whatever your preference, you can be suited.

The royal salmon, king of all fish, is premier prize. There are also trout, togue, black bass, perch and pickerel. Maine waters are celebrated for their trout, and in many places white perch, pickerel and black bass offer sport hardly less exhilarating than the aristocratic salmon and trout. The fishing season opens with the departure of the ice from lakes and ponds. Fly-fishing continues at its best until summer weather, and in not a few localities, even the warmest days find the waters sufficiently cool to make good sport. As summer ends there is fine fly-fishing generally and many anglers look forward to the fall sport with just as much zest as in the spring.

Just as in the case of hunting, not a few sportsmen go on their fishing trips without guides, but for the newcomer a guide is a big help. His many accomplishments as a chef, to say nothing of the information which he will impart on fishermen’s lore, make him a valuable adjunct to any party. No man needs to be told that half the fun of a fishing trip is to partake of the freshly caught trout cooked over a campfire. Where can be found a finer feed than this? No king’s kitchen can produce a dish of such supreme goodness.

The following pages contain a complete directory of stations on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, the fishing waters reached from these stations, and other information of value.

Vacation in the woods, the delights of angling and the splendid returns to be gained from an annual outing in “the open” of the Aroostook country have been the subjects of many rhapsodies.

After a personal experience has been enjoyed it is easy to understand how enthusiasts are stirred to penning their admiration for the delights that are offered by this country of unsurpassed natural attractions and unbeatable records for the size and splendor of its piscatorial prizes.
The Sportsman's Directory

A practically complete list of sporting camps, hotels and fishing waters reached from each station on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad Camps and hotels are numbered to show by comparison with the list of Fishing Waters on what lake, stream or river they are located.

Sea salmon are taken at the Bangor Pool, in the Penobscot River, at the head of tidewater, as they run up the river in spring en route to higher waters to spawn. Salmon are taken there weighing up to 30 pounds. Best fishing during May and June.

!Map of Maine Woods
The foregoing list is compiled for the fresh-water fisherman. Those desiring salt-water fishing should go to Searsport, Kidder, or Stockton. These places, situated on Penobscot Bay, offer the vacationist fishing for cutters, tom-cods, and flounders, and the digging of clams. Deep-sea fishing parties may also be arranged at these places.

It will be noticed that rates per day or week are not filled in, in several cases, but on account of existing conditions, the hotel and camp proprietors did not feel justified in giving rates for season 1922 so far in advance. Rates, however, will be given upon application, and such rates as are already given are subject to change.

A WORD TO CAMP-OWNERS

In the spirit of co-operation and for the further development of the Maine Woods as the nation's premier vacation section, it is suggested that camp-owners give particular attention to answering inquiries and replying to letters from prospective visitors to Maine. In case camps are already filled, the inquirer should be treated courteously with the idea that later, when accommodations are available, he may become a patron. It is unnecessary to emphasize the importance of fair treatment to all visitors, particularly in regard to the avoidance of over-charges. It is noticeable that the best conducted camps, the owners of which are alert and eager to meet the desires of their patrons and who are equitable in the treatment of all their guests, have the same patrons year after year and these regular patrons pass along the word among their friends so that there is never a lack of patronage. Let's all work together to keep Maine in the lead as the great vacation state.
Aroostook Boasts "Peaches" as Well as Potatoes
Aroostook
The Premier Potato County
A Story of the Agricultural Supremacy of
This Maine Crop Champion

By Dr. Leon S. Merrill
Dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Maine

Aroostook has been called the "Premier Potato County of America." No one can question her claim to this title. She has earned it by right of achievement and apparently is in little immediate danger of losing the outstanding lead she has attained in the production of this staple article of food.

This, however, does not tell the whole story of Aroostook's standing as a county in the agricultural world. Among all the agricultural counties in the United States, but one county produces crops of greater total value. No less an authority than the Bureau of the Census, United States Department of Commerce, places the value of her crops at $52,541,205.00 and the value of her crop and live stock products at $54,376,256.00. Potatoes comprise approximately four-fifths of the total value of all her farm products, while hay and forage, small grains and dairy products follow in the order of their relative values.

In size, Aroostook County comprises 6408 square miles or 4,129,920 acres. Of this total area, however, only about 20 per cent or 850,208 acres, are included in the farm lands of the county, the balance being occupied chiefly by forests.

The soil and climate are especially favorable for all kinds of farming enterprises making up the agriculture of the county. It can be truly said that the farmers of Aroostook County are engaged in highly specialized farming. Potato growing is the chief industry and around this industry, with few exceptions, are organized all other farming enterprises. Aroostook potatoes are noted for their exceptionally fine quality and productiveness. While the bulk of the crop is sold as table stock, thousands of car loads of seed potatoes are shipped annually for planting in the eastern part of the United States. Much of this seed goes to the Southern States, from Virginia south as far as Texas.

Only the most modern farm equipment and labor saving machinery is used. It is doubtful if, in any part of the United States, production methods have been developed to a higher point of scientific and economic efficiency. If proof of this statement was needed it would be necessary only to refer to the unusually large per-acre yields for confirmation. The up-to-date potato farmer figures on a yield of approximately 300 bushels per acre, while yields of 400 and 450 bushels per acre are not uncommon. Incidentally it might be said of the potato crop for the year 1921, that on an estimated acreage of 99,750 acres the yield averaged close to 300 bushels per acre.

The value of the potato crop so far over-shadowed in amount the values of other products that little is ever heard of what the county is doing in the production of cereal grains, hay, dairy and other products. A reference to the census data of 1919 will show that 95,938 acres were used in the production of grains and 195,049 acres in the production of hay and forage, and in this connection it is worth while to note that not only the total acreage of potatoes, small grains and hay, but also the per-acre yield has steadily increased during the last forty years.

Several fine agricultural fairs are held annually and the visitor who thinks of Aroostook County only in terms of potatoes is given a rather startling surprise when he observes the magnitude and quality of live stock exhibits and is told that within the county are some of the most valuable herds of pure bred cattle in the state and that nowhere can work horses of finer type and quality be found.

Farmers' organizations, both business and social, find a fertile field for development in the county. Leading all other organizations in point of membership is the Grange. In addition to its social interests the Grange has fostered the forming of many farmers' cooperative enterprises and agencies. Cooperative Grange insurance companies for insuring farm property are being successfully conducted and several cooperative Grange stores transacting a total business of more than a million dollars annually have been established. The most extensive farmers' business organization is the Aroostook Federation of Farmers, formed chiefly for marketing the potato crop of its members and the purchasing of supplies used in the business. This company owns its own fertilizer plant and transacts a volume of business in the handling of potatoes, fertilizers and spray materials amounting in value to several million dollars annually. The farmers of the county support an active Farm Bureau employing two well trained and experienced men as County Agricultural Agents.

This story would not be complete without at least a brief statement concerning the tremendously important part played by the railroads and banking institutions in promoting the agricultural welfare of the county. Two nearly parallel lines of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad traverse the county from one end to the other, with branches connecting these two lines at strategic points, thus furnishing an outlet from nearly all parts of the county to the great markets of the country. The opening of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad marked the beginning of a new agricultural era in this section of Maine. Since then progress has been rapid and we now find Aroostook County firmly established as one of the greatest and most important agricultural sections in America. It is well known that Aroostook banking institutions have confidence in the county and in her people and that they back that confidence by using the funds under their control largely for the development and support of Aroostook enterprises.

Considering the high state of agricultural development already reached, it may be thought that little opportunity now remains for the new comer within the county or for the young man of limited means to make a place for himself in this enterprising, preeminently successful community. Such, however, is not the case. In fact the exact opposite is true. Nowhere within the knowledge of the writer is there greater opportunity for the capable, industrious, ambitious man of integrity to establish himself in farming and to work his way into a reasonably large and profitable farming business, than can be found in this live, progressive section of the Pine Tree State. The experiences of the past have shown that new comers within the county soon catch the stride and readily become a part of the spirit and enterprise of its people. Aroostook people believe in Aroostook County and work together for its material, social and educational advancement.

There are also large quantities of similar woods obtainable in Canada which could be brought into Northern Maine via the International Railway Bridge at Van Buren without duty and manufactured at points along the line of this railroad.

From the time the ice is out until October the angler can always get his trout, salmon and togue. There are a large number of small lakes and streams nearby which produce excellent sport for our guests after the lake fishing is over.

AN ENJOYABLE VACATION

There is boating, canoeing, exceptional bathing, automobiling and outdoor games to be enjoyed by the vacationist. Northwest Inn is an ideal starting place for the Allagash and St. John canoe trips.

EXCELLENT HUNTING

Northwest Inn is the last hotel or sporting camp before entering the great wilderness north of Moosehead Lake, and is therefore most advantageously situated for the hunter of big game and partridge. Both are very plentiful and can be easily handled for shipment from Seboomook.

THE MANAGEMENT of the Inn is such as to insure a good time for all, and the dining room is plentifully supplied with the best of food. References and booklets on request.

THE NORCROSS HOUSE and TRANSPORTATION CO.

Sportsmen going into the woods from Norcross will find comfortable accommodations here. The house is lighted by gas and electric lights, heated by steam and has hot and cold water in every room, also rooms with private bath. A chance to get a good night's rest after traveling all day on the train.

Parties taking the sleeper from Boston, arriving at Norcross early the next morning, will have an opportunity to get a warm breakfast and a chance to change to their woods clothes, if they wish, before beginning their trip to camp.

In connection with the hotel we have a supply store where camping parties may purchase everything necessary for a camping trip. We would also be glad to engage guides and plan tenting trips for sportsmen who have never visited this section before, as we are in touch with all the well-known guides in this section of the country. Our steamers make regular trips across the lakes from June 15 to October 15, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, after the arrival of the 10:00 A.M. train from Bangor. Arrangements may be made for a special boat to go earlier if desired, leaving Norcross not later than 7:00 A.M. Fare on the regular boat is $1.50 each. Charges for a special boat will cost $7.50 in addition to the regular fare of $1.50 for each person. For further information write

THROUGH our long established connections here and abroad we are in a position to render complete service to banks, corporations and individuals and offer the following facilities:

Investment Securities. Listed and unlisted securities bought and sold. Maturing investments collected. Inquiries invited regarding the status of investments which clients hold or contemplate purchasing. Private wire connections with Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Detroit, enabling us to give prompt reports on securities in those markets.

Travelers' Letters of Credit. Banks and bankers in all important cities may arrange to issue these letters in dollars or in sterling over their own signature. Brown Brothers & Co.'s Letters are among the oldest and best known abroad.

Imports and Exports. Drafts under our commercial credits are purchased at favorable discount rates by bankers everywhere, being negotiable in London as prime bankers' acceptances, and "eligible" acceptances in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

Deposit Accounts. Those of banks, corporations, firms and individuals received on favorable terms in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and London. We especially solicit the deposits of firms and corporations doing an international business.

Credit Reports. The standing of firms and corporations at home and abroad indicated on request.

Foreign Exchange. Drafts and cable transfers on foreign countries bought and sold. Foreign and domestic collections.
